

Low Marsh/High Marsh: elevation above sea level is lower in a low marsh than a high marsh. This means if water is coming downstream or tidal, a low marsh area will be flooded to a greater depth than a high marsh area. In wetlands, differences in elevation of an inch can mean an extra four hours of flooding a day. This will have significant impact on plants in the wetland.

